About the guidelines

The Media Forward Fund selection process includes several steps. They are divided into oral and written stages.

With these guidelines, we provide applicants with additional information on the written procedures and explain what to look out for when applying.

The aim of these guidelines is to present the application process as transparently as possible and to anticipate the most important questions that might arise.

Basic information can be found on our website under the Apply tab. There you will find concise answers to the most important questions, including a timetable for the current call for application and our five overarching selection criteria.

Should you still have questions after reading our website and the guidelines, we invite you to take a look at our detailed FAQs.

If your question also isn't addressed in the FAQs, please contact us by email at: funding@mediaforwardfund.org.

Thank you for your interest in a grant from the Media Forward Fund and for the time you invest in the application process!

Focus: General Funding Line (GEN)

At a glance: With our funding, we hope to assist media organizations to strengthen their financial sustainability, allowing them to take their organization and journalistic work to the next level of development.

In detail: Our focus is on projects which contribute to the growth of an existing offering, format, distribution channel or revenue stream and which ...

Ideally:

- ... close a gap in reporting.
- ... can create transformative added value in the media sector through the use of new approaches.
- ... have a particular focus on reaching target audiences that have thus far been underserved by the news media.

Must-haves checklist

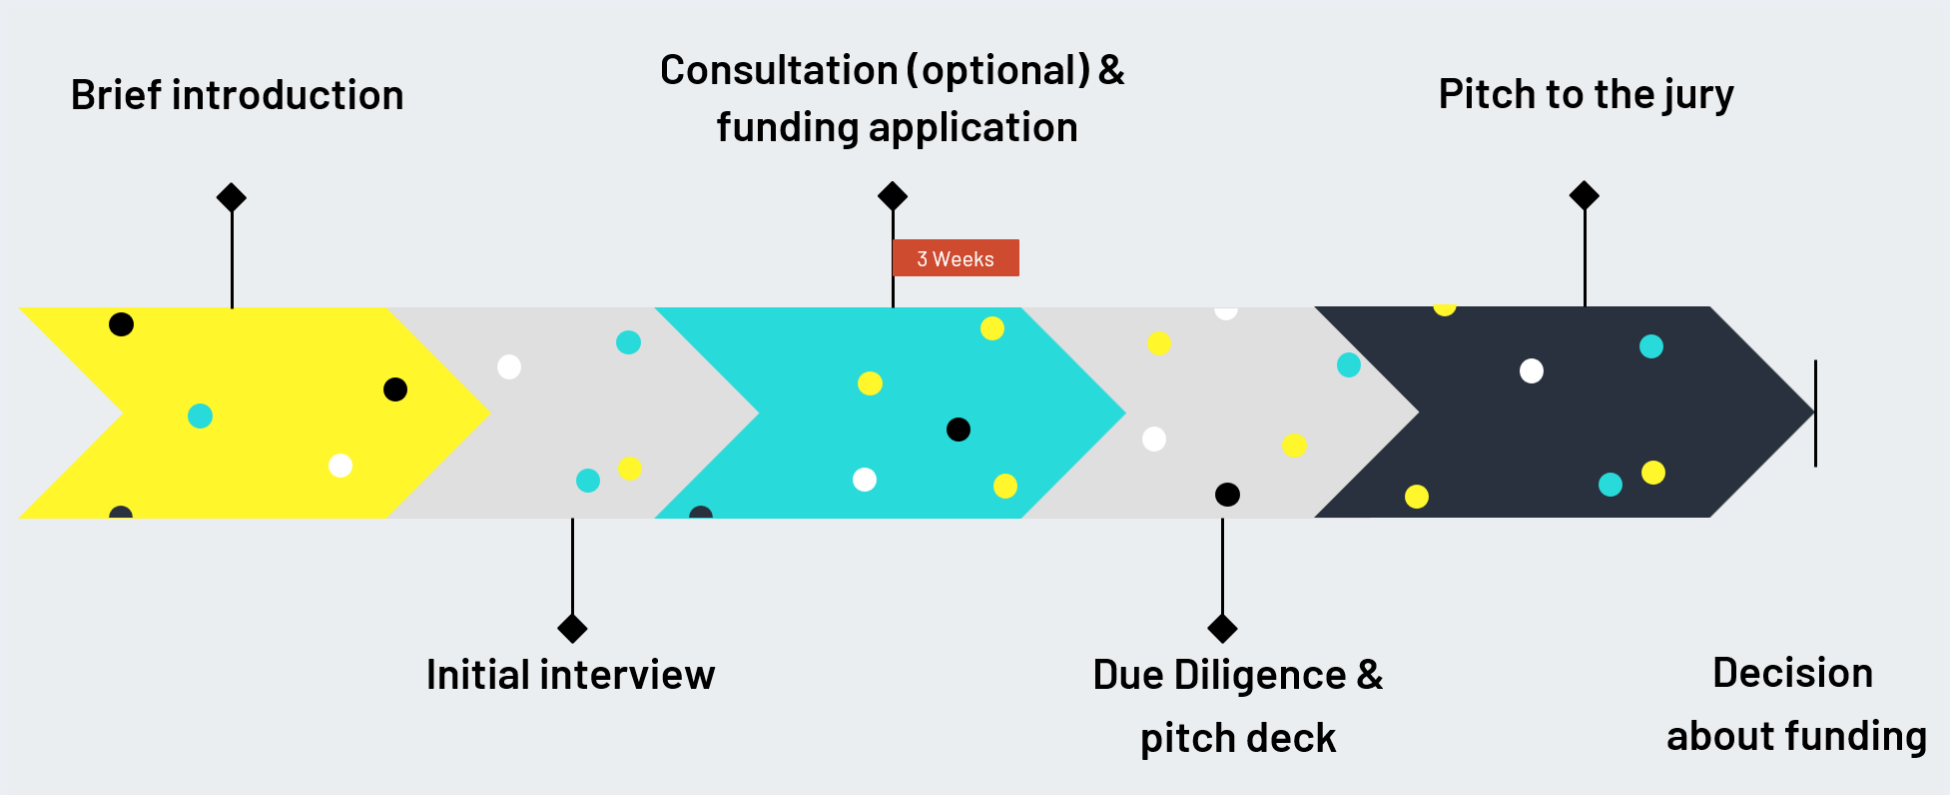

You must meet the following requirements in order to be eligible for funding:

- 1) The registered headquarters of your overall organization is in Germany, Austria or Switzerland.
- 2) Your organization must serve the common good. That means that the revenues produced by your work are predominantly generated with the intention of strengthening journalism in its social mission of promoting public education and strengthening democracy.
- 3) Your work is based on recognized journalistic/editorial standards, which you document publicly (or plan to do so). You are committed to the principles of the press code in your country.
- 4) You have a distinct structural and personnel separation between editorial and business management. If your company is younger than five years old and has fewer than 10 full-time equivalent employees (FTEs), there must be a demonstrable intention to implement this separation in the future.
- 5) You already have a working business model aimed at serving the common good. Consequently, you can demonstrate a proof-of-concept for your journalistic offering in addition to a product/market fit, confirmed by initial revenues generated from several sources primarily from the DACH region.
- 6) With your project, you are aiming to grow your revenue streams focused on the common good rather than merely striving to continue business-as-usual.

Selection process overview

The selection process is divided into five stages:

Brief introduction

The brief introduction is an online form which, for technical reasons, can only be called up once. Your answers to the questions cannot be cached. It is best to prepare your answers in advance using the brief introduction preview and then copy them all at once into the form before submission. Because of the large number of applications we receive, we are unable to send confirmation of receipt.

Preview short intro

The aim of the brief introduction is to determine your eligibility and organization size based on the information provided and to gain a first impression of your organization, your journalistic work and your idea for using the grant. For this reason, most of the questions are single-choice questions. The number of characters for open answers is limited, as the focus should be on the essential information and therefore short, concise answers are initially sufficient.

In the brief introduction, you confirm your eligibility in line with our six must-haves (see page 5), briefly introduce your organization and your journalistic work, provide quantitative information on the size of your organization and the reach of your work, and briefly explain your project. We are particularly interested in learning:

1. How you specifically wish to use the funding and who you intend to reach
2. What effect your project will have on your long-term strategy and development of your organization, particularly the growth of your business model focused on the common good
3. To what extent your project intends to rely on approaches that differ from existing methods in Germany, Austria and Switzerland (DACH region) and/or in your market and/or meet a specific need
4. And whether your project targets communities that have thus far been underserved by the news media

Furthermore, we would also like to know how much funding you will need and for how long.

Please note that in the brief introduction, we also ask whether the applicant organization is dependent on an affiliated entity (e.g. company) or is under the control of a third party (e.g. parent company or companies). This aspect is important for determining the size of your organization. If your organization is part of a larger overall organization, the size determination is not based on the applicant organization, but on the entire overall organization. If the overall organization has more than 30 full-time equivalent employees (FTEs), it is considered large and is thus only eligible for project financing.

Once your eligibility for funding has been established by the information provided in the brief introduction and if your project fits with our funding goals, we would like to get to know you better by way of a telephone call or video call lasting a maximum of 30 minutes. No additional preparation is required for the initial interview.

Funding application

Once your eligibility for funding has been established by the information provided in the brief introduction and during the initial interview, you will be permitted to submit your funding application within three weeks through a form in our funding portal.

Preview funding application

The initial interview, as an intermediate step between the brief introduction and the funding application, is intended to ensure that only organizations or projects with a real chance of success invest the time and effort needed for the application.

Eligible organizations will receive a registration link from us by e-mail, which they can use to register and access the relevant application form. The upload function for the required attachments can also be found at the end of the form. Before you begin preparing your application, however, you have the option of participating in a consultation discussion to clarify formal and content-related questions with us and to exchange ideas for the design of a suitable project.

The aim of your funding application is to provide us with a comprehensive picture of your organization, your journalistic work and your idea for using the grant. The structure of the application form thus reflects those three areas.

Based on a set of 14 questions, we want to learn more about the skills in your team, the current state of your organization and your strategy for the next three years. We also want to gain a better understanding of your business model and how your project will contribute to its growth in addition to the make-up and needs of your target audience. Finally, we are interested in how your project differs from existing developments and thus not only strengthens your unique selling point but also can create transformative added value in the media sector.

For two of the questions, your answers will be automatically taken from the brief introduction so that you can use them as a basis for specifying your statements.

We have set guidelines for the number of characters per response. However, there is no default character limit so that you do not need to shorten sentences. Nevertheless, we recommend sticking to the suggested character maximum as orientation. Designated questions can also be answered in bullet points.

Timeline

Your funding application must also include a timeline in tabular form (e.g. in Excel) based on clearly defined milestones (15-20 milestones) that are to be achieved within the funding period.

Milestones should be seen as results-oriented sets of steps that lead to one or more verifiable partial result(s) (milestones). We suggest assigning each milestone a title, a deadline (e.g. month or quarter of a year), a description and a possible proof of fulfillment. Milestones can also be structured according to categories (e.g. recruiting, strategy planning, development, etc.)

Please ensure that the milestones reflect your goals when it comes to the further development of your organization, your journalistic work and, especially, the growth of your business model focused on the common good.

Financing overview and planning

Your funding application must also include a financing overview and plan. The main purpose of the overview is to allow us to assess the relationship between costs and the expected impact, to verify whether you have the necessary proprietary resources (project funding for large media) and to understand what difference the grant can make to your organization.

Preview financing overview and planning

The detailed overview should be submitted in tabular form (Excel) and should depict your budgetary planning for the current year as well as your planned cost and revenue development for the next three years, including the expenses covered by the grant applied for.

The overview should clearly demonstrate what difference the grant will make in terms of enabling your organization to generate (additional) revenue. If necessary, several scenarios (max. three) can be submitted within the same Excel sheet. Further explanations can be added in the form of notes below the tables.

With regard to expenses, please differentiate between the various types of expenses e.g. personnel costs, office and administrative expenses, costs for services, etc. and include, if applicable, all planned project revenues and other sources of income.

Information can be provided in either euros or Swiss francs. Only the total amount of funding requested along with specific details should be provided in euros in the designated spaces.

Please observe the instructions in the sample templates for the financing overview and finance planning as there are differences in tax law between for-profit media organizations and non-profit media organizations.

In the case of a cooperation with a for-profit media organization, the financial contribution made by the Fund to the cooperation partner is subject to VAT. Since, as a German non-profit organization, the Media Forward Fund is unable to deduct the VAT incurred, the VAT has the effect of increasing costs.

If the for-profit media organization is based in Austria or Switzerland, the “reverse charge” rule is in effect, whereby only the net amount can be paid out to the for-profit media organization.

Please also note that we are unable to finance costs at non-profit media organizations that are attributable to commercial business operations. Such costs include, for example, expenses for the operation or development of an online shop for the marketing of products or the sale of food or drinks as part of the organization's own events.

In cooperations with for-profit media organizations, we are unable to provide support for activities that boost the commercial sales activities of that for-profit company (e.g. a newsletter that is only sent to paying customers or published content that is behind a paywall). In addition, no assets can be financed by the Media Forward Fund that become the property of the for-profit organization free of charge (e.g. the programming of an app that boosts the sales value of the app and thus of the company, or the development of an online platform).

Traffic and audience marketing plan

Along with your funding application, you are also required to submit a traffic and audience marketing plan for the current year. This refers to your plans to achieve your growth targets with regard to reach and the revenues earned through your users. Should you not yet have a traffic and audience marketing plan, we would request that you develop such a plan for the first funding year.

Traffic and audience marketing plan

The The plan may include the following information:

- Website: Unique users and monthly visits
- Newsletter: Subscriber number and opening rates
- Social Media: Engagement
- Podcast: Downloads per month across all platforms

Due diligence

After reviewing the applications, we continue the selection process with the most promising projects by deepening the due diligence process on your organization.

The due diligence process is integrated in the entire selection process and is finalized before we send your application to the jury.

The assessment is based on the information you have provided, desk research, internal documents you have submitted (attachments to the funding application) and one or two reference interviews, which we will conduct following the review of your application. In your funding application, you are asked to provide two references who will be willing to provide detailed and candid feedback on your work and your organization. We also reserve the right to ask members of our expert council to evaluate you and your project.

Should we determine that the internal documents submitted with your funding application are insufficient, we will request additional information in a timely manner.

Once due diligence has been completed, results will be summarized in a short report, which will further inform the jury's decision, along with the Media Forward Fund team's funding recommendation and your pitch.

Pitch deck

As we in the Media Forward Fund team complete the due diligence process for your organization, you will be preparing your pitch for the jury by working on your pitch deck.

The pitch deck, completed in PowerPoint format with approx. 10 – 15 slides, should reflect the most important information from your funding application. We suggest an overarching structure with three parts:

- 1) About us
- 2) Our work and where we currently stand
- 3) Where we want to go with our project

Further details and recommendations regarding the structure and formalities will be sent to organizations admitted to the pitch by e-mail.

It is important to note here that it is the information on the slides that counts first and foremost, and not the appearance of the presentation. We are aware that many organizations do not employ their own graphic designers.

On the basis of the first draft of your pitch deck, we conduct a feedback meeting that lasts approximately one hour. Afterwards, you will have sufficient time to revise your pitch deck so that it is finished in time for pitch day.
